

Radioactive Waste: Unacceptable Burden on Future Generations

Posted by Joan Russow

Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:19 - Last Updated Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:45

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

Radioactive Waste: Unacceptable Burden on Future Generations

Posted by Joan Russow

Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:19 - Last Updated Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:45

In 2015 the Harper Government gave five corporations based in the U.K., U.S. and Canada

a 10-year contract to find fast and cheap ways to dispose of the federal government's own ra

If these projects go ahead, future site managers could keep an eye on things for a time. They

The corporations propose "institutional control" periods of 300 years for the mound and 100 y

oned. Facilities would deteriorate. The Winnipeg and Ottawa Rivers would be polluted for hundreds of thousands

The corporations' own environment impact statements indicate that people could receive exces

The mound and reactor tombs would also release radioactive substances during normal operat

Such risks to Canadians exceed the risks that we are willing to accept at present. We do not cu

Should the corporations that now operate federal nuclear sites be allowed to impose such risks

At present, under the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act, the Canadian Nuclear Safety C

Under the Nuclear Safety and Control Act, the federal government and CNSC have exclusive ju

to health, safety and the environment once nuclear substances are no longer in use – that is, once they have bee

Not the nuclear industry, which has already imposed a massive waste burden on society in the

Radioactive Waste: Unacceptable Burden on Future Generations

Posted by Joan Russow

Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:19 - Last Updated Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:45

Not the CNSC, which has no legally-binding regulations for radioactive waste management.

Not the federal government. Its pathetic 3-bullet Radioactive Waste Policy Framework merely s

The federal go Canada's radioactive waste. This waste came from fede

The federal government estimates the costs of dealing with its radioactive waste liability as bein

Are these costs why the federal government seems so unwilling to develop a policy stating clea

In the absence of laws, regulations and policies to protect us and our environment, the federal g

In 2015 the Harper Government gave five corporations based in the U.K., U.S. and Canada a

If these projects go ahead, future site managers could keep an eye on things for a time. They

The corporations propose "institutional control" periods of 300 years for the mound and 100 y

Radioactive Waste: Unacceptable Burden on Future Generations

Posted by Joan Russow

Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:19 - Last Updated Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:45

oned. Facilities would deteriorate. The Winnipeg and Ottawa Rivers would be polluted for hundreds of thousands

The corporations' own environment impact statements indicate that people could receive excess

The mound and reactor tombs would also release radioactive substances during normal operat

Such risks to Canadians exceed the risks that we are willing to accept at present. We do not cu

Should the corporations that now operate federal nuclear sites be allowed to impose such risks

At present, under the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act, the Canadian Nuclear Safety C

Under the Nuclear Safety and Control Act, the federal government and CNSC have exclusive ju

to health, safety and the environment once nuclear substances are no longer in use – that is, once they have bee

Not the nuclear industry, which has already imposed a massive waste burden on society in the

Not the CNSC, which has no legally-binding regulations for radioactive waste management.

Not the federal government. Its pathetic 3-bullet Radioactive Waste Policy Framework merely s

The federal go Canada's radioactive waste. This waste came from fede

The federal government estimates the costs of dealing with its radioactive waste liability as bein

Are these costs why the federal government seems so unwilling to develop a policy stating clea

Radioactive Waste:Unacceptable Burden on Future Generations

Posted by Joan Russow

Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:19 - Last Updated Tuesday, 05 February 2019 13:45

In the absence of laws, regulations and policies to protect us and our environment, the federal g